

Master of Laws (LL.M)

Sir Thomas More Building

Strathmore University

Law School

Our LL.M offers the students increased understanding of local, regional and international legal principles.

Course Description

The Master of Laws at Strathmore Law School is an 18-month programme designed for experienced lawyers and legal practitioners who wish to expand their knowledge and expertise without interrupting their careers. The SLS LL.M offers the students first-rate increased understanding of local, regional and international legal principles. Students may enroll for a general LL.M or may choose to major in one of the five thematic areas of law offered, namely, Intellectual Property Law, International Criminal Law, International Financial Law and Regulation and International Energy Law and Policy.

Through lectures taught predominantly by international faculty members, case studies depicting actual problem cases in industry, research and through group work amongst academic peers, the programme will aim to provide students with the theoretical and practical building blocks and conceptual tools necessary for the more advanced tasks they will be called upon to tackle throughout the course.

Programme Objectives

The learning outcomes of the Master of Laws programme are to:

1. Critically assess and provide modern, innovative and adequate legal training to confront complex situations in their line of work at individual, institutional, national and regional level.
2. Acquire advanced specialist knowledge in emerging areas of the law with an in-depth knowledge guided by the specific choices the candidates may make during their progression within the LL.M programme.
3. Conduct independent academic research in the legal field and to make a contribution to the development of the law that is relevant to society.
4. Independently engage in academic discourse with peers from a diversity of legal backgrounds.
